HOW MUCH CAN YOU PAY FOR FEEDER PIGS?

Dean Baldwin and Allan Lines

How many dollars can you pay for feeder pigs and still make a profit?

To accurately predict expected profits or losses, each producer must estimate costs of production and the selling price four to ten months into the future.

Production costs are the sum of variable and fixed costs. In this analysis, the price of feeder pigs and feed costs were varied. Other costs including veterinarian fees, medicine, power and utilities, marketing costs, bedding, labor, manure and handling costs, interest on the purchase cost of the feeder, repairs, depreciation, interest on investment, and taxes on buildings and facilities were held constant.

Labor was priced at $3.50 per hour ($3.75 per hog sold). Other expenses held constant were 1) $4.00 per hog for veterinarian, marketing, fuel, electricity, and miscellaneous, 2) $5.00 per hog to pay for buildings and equipment (depreciation, interest, repairs, taxes and insurances), and 3) $1.00 per hog for interest on capital invested in feeder pigs.

Selling price is more difficult to estimate. However, some insight can be gained by carefully evaluating prices on the futures and cash markets. In addition, outlook price data and its interpretation are available from universities, farm magazines, and professional farm management firms.

Break Even Prices

Use expected production costs and outlook information to estimate break even purchase price. Break even purchase price predicts the maximum price that you can pay for feeder pigs without losing money. You can calculate it by:

where total cost of gain is feed costs plus non-feed costs. As long as your actual purchase price is below the break even price, you'll probably make a profit.

Break Even

To help slaughter hog feeders determine what they can pay for feeder pigs, a table of break even prices has been prepared. The table contains three weights of feeder pigs, three weights of slaughter hogs, six soybean prices, eight corn prices, and 16 prices for finished slaughter hogs. The pounds of feed required to produce a pound of pork were varied. Feed conversion used in the analysis varied with purchase weight. To provide a basis for comparison, 640 pounds of feed were required to raise a pig from 40 to 220 pounds (356 pounds of feed per 100 pounds of pork produced).

If corn is $2.80/bu., soybean meal $160/ton, and you expect slaughter hogs weighing 200 lbs. to average $50/cwt, Table 1 shows that you can pay $54.96/head for a 40 lb. feeder pig and cover all costs. To earn a profit the producer must buy the pig for less than $55.00.

If, however, you are interested in only covering your variable costs, you could pay $60.00/head. This price is determined by adding the $5.00 per head charge that was deducted for using buildings and equipment (costs which will be incurred whether you buy pigs or not) to the break even price found in the table. Expected market conditions should be one of the major factors determining initial feeder pig purchase weight and final slaughter hog selling weight.
